STUDYING AT CAMPUS LIBRARY

The Campus Library offers approximately 950 study spaces for individual and group work across two sections of the building (the original and the new building).

Old wing or new wing?

The original and new building offer different work environments. You can tell the two parts of the building apart by the color of the carpet (original building = red, new building = green). The amenities at the individual workstations (lamps, outlets) are the same in both buildings.
The original building has a fountain and plants on the ground floor.

You can decide which suits you best.

Orientation

Working in a quiet and focused environment

You'll find our individual workstations on all floors of both the original and new building. They are designed for quiet, focused work. Conversations are not permitted here.

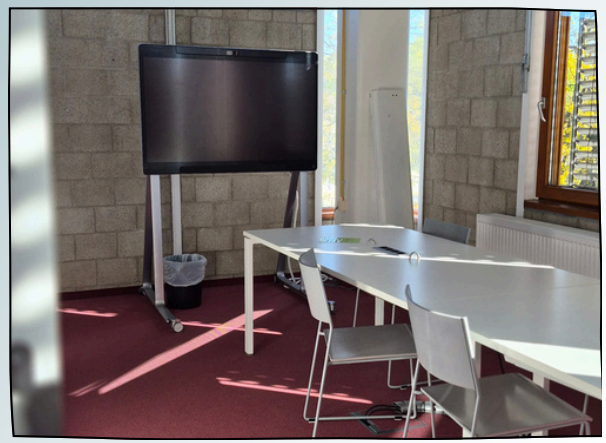

On the upper floor of the new wing, you will find the most natural light with a view outside, as well as an accessible terrace.

On the ground floor and basement level of the new building near the staircases, as well as on Level 6 of the original building, you'll find partitioned workstations for focused work.

Group Study

Our group study rooms provide space for discussion, collaborative learning, and project work. All rooms are equipped with whiteboards, and whiteboard markers can be borrowed from the Circulation Desk on the ground floor. Our Multipurpose Room, located on the second floor of the New Building, offers additional space for larger groups.

New Building Basement - Group study rooms 1-4
New Building Ground floor - Group study rooms 5-8
New Building Level 2 - Multipurpse Room

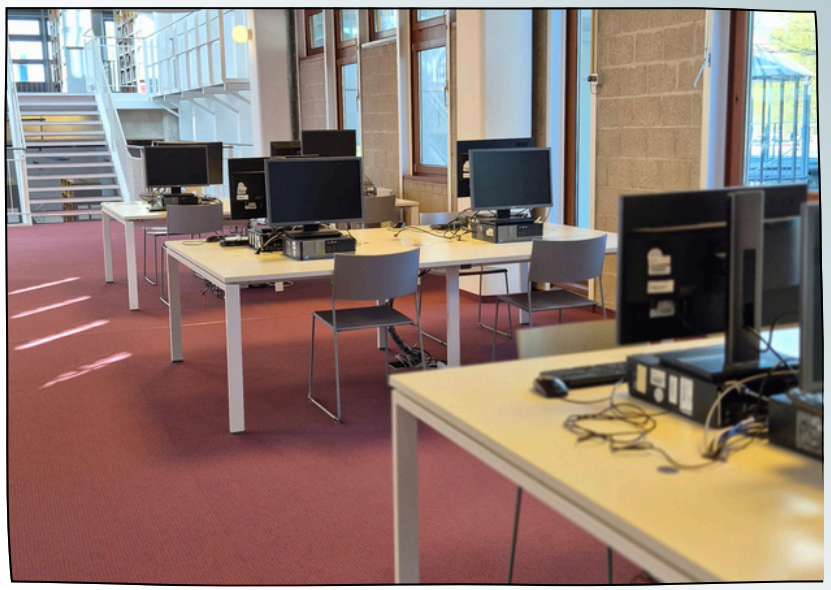

Original Building Level 2 - Group study rooms 9-10
Original Building Level 4 - Group study room 11
Original Building Level 5 - Group study room 12
Original Building Level 6 - Group study room 13

Digital Workspace

Computer workstations are available in the basement and upper floor of the New Building and on Level 3 of the Original Building. Log in using your FU account. A keyboard and mouse for the workstations in the New Building can be borrowed from the Circulation Desk.
If you would like to connect your own laptop to an external monitor, monitors are available throughout the library. The required cables can also be borrowed from the Circulation Desk.

Studying with children

The Accessible Study Room, located on Level 3 of the Original Building, provides a quiet and supportive study environment for students with visual impairments, disabilities, and chronic health conditions.

The room is equipped with assistive technologies and offers appropriate lighting and glare protection to support focused, independent study. It is designed to accommodate a variety of individual access needs and provide an inclusive learning environment.

Accessible Study Room

Flexible Study Spaces

Our Learning Lounge, located on the ground floor of the New Building, offers a flexible space for collaborative work, online meetings, interviews, and attending online classes.

Conversation is welcome, but please be considerate of other library users and keep noise to a reasonable level.
The area features eight Haven Pods, each accommodating up to two people.

Reservations are not required.

Study Carrels

Our Study Carrels, located in the basement and upper floor of the New Building, provide quiet, individual study spaces for extended periods of focused work.
Carrels are available only to:

- Master's students writing a registered thesis in the fields of Natural Sciences, Cultural Studies, Educational Sciences, Mathematics, Computer Science, or Psychology
- Doctoral researchers (PhD students)
- Pharmacy students preparing for their Second State Examination
- Visiting researchers

To apply, you must provide official confirmation of your registered thesis or your eligibility.
Carrels are lockable and are assigned upon application for periods ranging from four weeks to three months.
